

A Delicate Balance — Swallowtail Architecture

Inspired by the Coast

MODERN COTTAGES WE LOVE

A DELICATE BALANCE

BETWEEN ART + VIEW

BY SWALLOWTAIL ARCHITECTURE

Photography: Tripp Smith Photography

This Sullivan's Island site in South Carolina offers some of the best views on the island. The design brief was simple: a new contemporary home with a reverse floor plan to allow the spaces where the homeowners spend the most time to get the highest and most expansive views. The challenge was placing an extensive art collection in the home where solid walls are limited and views from every room desired. The solution: treat both view and art equally.

Also art collectors, the homeowners wanted their home to be more than a picture window for the view. It would also be the gallery to frame their collection.

About Swallowtail Architecture

Led by Architect Rachel Burton, Swallowtail Architecture is a woman-owned and woman-operated business. Its entire team works hard every day to help its clients bring their dreams to life of living in the beautiful South Carolina Lowcountry. www.swallowtailarchitecture.com